Massachusetts Golf Hole Judged Most Beautifully Brutal

JOHNSTON, Iowa – November 25, 2008 – The 416-yard, par 4, seventeenth hole at Butter Brook Golf Club, Westford, Mass., has been selected as one of the winners of the John Deere Credit search for the 18 Most Beautifully Brutal Golf Holes™ in North America.

The Butter Brook hole was chosen from entries throughout the U.S. and Canada (excluding Quebec) by a panel of judges that includes Jeff Babineau, editor of Golfweek; Pat Roberts, publisher of Golfdom; Joe Passov, architecture editor for Golf magazine; and Gary Van Sickle, golf editor for Sports Illustrated. The judges rated each entry on the basis of the hole's beauty as well as its difficulty.

Described by Babineau as a "classic New England beauty," Butter Brook's 17th is cut along the edge of a stream. It requires a long, forced carry over an environmentally sensitive area to a fairway that is guarded by a fescue slope on the right and a stone retaining wall on the left and snakes its way into the fairway. Its table-top green with a false front forces short approach shots to roll back onto the fairway 20 feet below the green surface.

"The hole features good shot values and requires good decision making," Babineau adds.

"The seventeenth hole at Butter Brook offers an outstanding example of how dedicated course owners, builders, architects and superintendents create and maintain holes that golfers talk about the entire year," says Steve Knutson, Director of golf leasing for John Deere Credit.

"John Deere Credit is proud to recognize these efforts and to provide golf courses throughout North America with equipment and lease products that help them keep courses beautiful and brutal," Knutson adds.
